GERMANS DRIVEN INTO EAST PRUSSIA

GERMAN ATTACKS ARE REPULSED BY FRENCH

Kaiser's Troops Take New Offensive Against Dixmude in Ypres Region

FRENCH TAKE NEW GROUND ON RIVER AISNE

Fighting on the North Sea and the Lys River Less Violent—French Advance in the Region North of Messines—British Troops Go Forward in the Neighborhood of Armentieres—Kaiser Has Called a Council of War Over Situation in Galicia.

(By International News Service.)

Paris, Nov. 9.—It was officially stated today that the Germans have taken new offensive against Dixmude and in the region of the Ypres, but all other attacks have been repulsed.

New German attacks in Alsace were repulsed.

The French advance has been slight, because of attacks of the foe in a heavy fog.

French Take New Ground

The following communication was issued by the war office last night:

"To the north the enemy appears to have concentrated their activity in the region of Ypres, without result. On the remainder of the line we are holding our ground everywhere.

"On the River Aisne we have reached to the northeast of Soissons the plateau of Vregny on which we had not gained a foothold.

"Elsewhere there is nothing to report."

Fighting Less Violent

The Sunday afternoon French official war statement said:

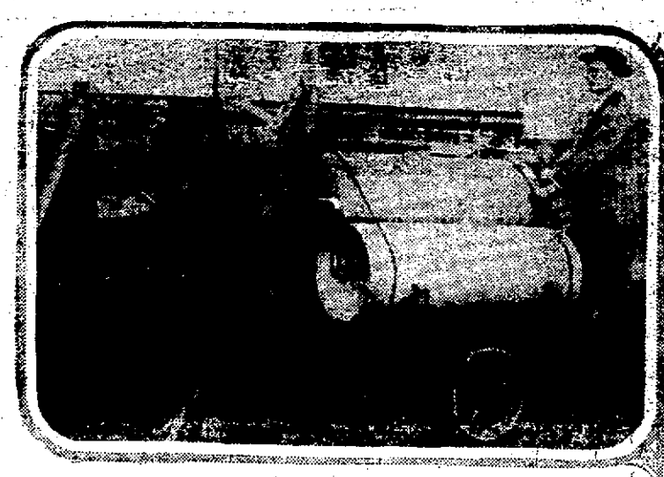

"Yesterday between the North sea and the Lys the fighting was less violent. Some attacks not general, of the enemy were repulsed in the direction of Dixmude and to the northeast of Ypres. On almost all this front we, in turn, took the offensive and advanced, notably in the region to the north of Messines.

"In the neighborhood of Armentieres the British troops progressed slightly. Between La Bassee and Arras the attacks of the enemy were repulsed.

"From Arras to Soissons nothing worthy of note took place.

Kaiser Grows Anxious

Rome, Nov. 9.—German advices received here say that Emperor William, much affected by the Russian victories, has held a council of war which was attended by Gen. von Hindenburg, the Duke of Wurtemburg and the Austrian chief of staff Field Marshal Baron Conrad von Hoetzendorf, to decide on a further plan of campaign.

DU BOIS H. S. STUDENT HURT IN SATURDAY'S GAME

"Hubb" Osburn, the DuBois football player who has laid out at the game Saturday, was removed from the Clearfield hospital, where he remained all day yesterday in a semi-conscious state, last evening to his home in DuBois. Manager Falcon, of the DuBois team, remained with him at the hospital. Osburn went into the game with all his strength and was not in a physical condition to stand the hard play, but put up a good fight until he was over-come.

INTERESTING MEETING OF WOMANS' CLUB TOMORROW

The womans club will hold a meeting on Tuesday afternoon, November 10, at 3 o'clock, in the club rooms in the Mossop building. Mrs. Lyons will read a paper on "The Spirit of Thankfulness." Mrs. McQuown, chairman of the charities committee, will give a helpful talk on "Ways and Means of Christmas Giving." The committee in charge of the Year Book hopes to have it ready for distribution at this meeting.

MAY SUCCEED WHITMAN AS DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Frederick C. Tanner.

New York, Nov. 9.—Frederick C. Tanner, chairman of the New York state Republican Committee, is said to be Governor-elect Whitman's choice to succeed him as District Attorney of New York county. District Attorney Whitman has not confirmed the report.

Matron of Ohio Home Incinerated

(By International News Service)

Canton, O., Nov. 9.—Fire destroyed the building of the Fairmount Childrens home and 26 boys narrowly escaped. The matron, Lillian Burdette was burned to death.

The fire was caused by a lamp explosion. The matron was not missed until her body was found.

DUBOIS GUNMEN GIVE THAT TOWN BAD SCARE

DuBois had a shooting affair Saturday afternoon in which the poor marksmanship of the participants was all that prevented a murder. Three Italians were engaged in the affray, Fred Clemens, Angelo Carmela and the latter's son, Joe Carameia. The older men had been drinking in one of the hotels. When young Caramela tried to get his father to go home Clemens became angry and is said to have opened fire on Joe. One bullet passed through Joe's clothing, but no damage was done, although the men were but a few feet apart.

After the shooting Clemens started to run away, but was captured by Sheriff McCloskey, who happened to be in town, and a number of DuBois citizens. Before the 'squire Clemens was fined $25 and placed in the borough lockup, and the Caramelas were fined $20 each on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. It is thought that Clemens will be held to answer before the court to a more serious offense, as he is said to have confessed that he intended to kill the Caramelas.

HIS LIFE SAVED BY A CRUCIFIX

Remarkable Escape of Young English Lance Corporal

MARVELOS TALES OF WOUNDED

Pluck of a Lieutenant Who Tried to Blow Up a Bridge—A Sergeant Who Did a Brave Deed in the Battle in Lorraine, France.

(By International News Service)

London, Nov. 9.—Many narrow escapes and deeds of wonderful bravery have been made by the injured British and Belgian soldiers now recovering in English hospitals. A young lance corporal of the King's Royal Rifles, who is recovering from a bullet in his knee, owes his life to a crucifix, which he picked up in an empty house, where he was billeted. A strange impulse compelled him to pick up the crucifix and put it in his haversack.

During an engagement a few days later many of the corporal's comrades were killed by bullets, which were almost spent. The young corporal was hit in the knee and later found when taken to a hospital that one of the spent bullets had also passed completely through his knapsack, but had been deflected from his body by the crucifix, one of the arms of which had been broken off by the bullet.

Private W. Hinton, of the First East Lancers, poses as the luckiest man in the army. He was hit by three bullets within a minute without serious injury. One bullet flattered five rounds of ammunition in his belt. Another smashed the magazine of his rifle and a third passed through his cap.

A Lieutenant's Pluck

A letter from one of the Royal Engineers describes the remarkable pluck of Lieutenant R. Pottinger, of Tedmouth. Pottinger and his section were attempting to blow up a bridge under fire. They laid the charge and the section retired. Lieutenant Pottinger and a sapper remained behind to light the fuse. The charge did not explode. The sapper then fired ten rounds of ammunition at the charge without success. Pottinger then said, "I'll make the thing go off." He shook hands with the sapper and walked to the bridge. There he put the muzzle of his revolver into the charge and fired all six cartridges. Even then the charge did not go off and the men had to flee, leaving the bridge intact. If the charge had gone off the young lieutenant would have disappeared completely, but the ap-

DU BOIS HIGH SCHOOL GIRL INJURED IN CLEARFIELD

On Saturday evening Miss Elizabeth Hoover, who, with a party of DuBois friends, attended the DuBois-Clearfield football game, was struck by the B. R. & P. train just as it pulled into the station. She had dropped her hanadkerchief and stooped to pick it up, not realizing how near it was to the track. Because of a curve in the road below the station the train leans toward the station as it comes in. The cylinder of the engine struck her above the right hip. Seeing her danger, John Hughes caught her and pulled her away from the wheels. Miss Hoover was badly cut about the head and suffered several hard bruises, but refused to be taken to the hospital here and was taken on the train to her home in DuBois.

AILMENTS TREATED BY A LOCAL CHIROPRACTOR

"If you should have ailments, consult a Chiropractor and let him put your spinal column en rapport with your nervous economy, so you can be a good automatic engine."
—Elbert Hubbard

Chiropractic is a science and has been recognized as such by the Scientific American. The nerves must be in perfect condition, free from pressure—otherwise you cannot remain well. If the spine is right, the man is right. Patients with so-called incurable diseases have regained their health by Chiropractic spinal adjustments.

Chiropractic does not confine itself to any one or special disease. It gets results in 90 per cent. of all disease conditions.

STATEMENT CORRECTING A WRONG IMPRESSION

The following statement by Dr. H. R. Bender, pastor of Trinity M. E. church and H. J. Flegal, superintendent of Trinity M. E. Sunday school, is printed to set at rest an erroneous impression regarding the policy of the Trinity officials:

There was a time when churces used to work on the principle of competition and place their hopes of advancement in efforts to destroy one another. We had thought that day had passed and that a broader vision of the Kingdom had developed the principle of cooperation of the churches. In harmony with this spirit the cooperative system of present-day evangelism has enlisted many denominations in union meetings of great power and efficiency. Our late union effort in this town was made possible by such co-operation and was carried through to the end without creating any sectarian rivalries or selfish activities.

We had hoped that this spirit of co-operation would be perpetuated, but in our present efforts to enlarge our Sunday school complaints come to us, that many of our Sunday school members are trying to enlarge their classes by inviting into their classes members of other Sunday schools; that this is being done in the spirit of rivalry, and to the injury of other Sunday schools.

All this is to be deplored: and we express the hope that no one enrolled in any other Sunday school will be disturbed in his or her relation to their Sunday school or church.

Rev. H. R. Bender, Pastor.
H. J. Flegal, Superintendent.

GOVERNMENT WINS SUIT AGAINST KATY RAILROAD

(By International News Service.)

Washington, Nov. 9.—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad lost its suit against the government for $16,000,000, the value of three million acres of Oklahoma land. The railroad claims this land was granted to it by the government fifty years ago and it was subsequently thrown open for settlement and is now owned by citizens of Oklahoma.

Last Animal in the Union Stock Yards in Chicago Killed and Work of Fumigation Begun in Hope of Reopening Market Next Thursday—Prices of Meat Not to rise.

(By International News Service)

Chicago, Nov. 9.—The last animal in the Union stock yards was killed today. The work of cleaning and fumigating the yards to remove the germs of the foot and mouth disease has been rdeoubide in the hope of having the market opnd on Thursday.

Twelve more infected herds were found, making the total thirty-nine. United States officials killed 500 dairy cows. The price of meat will not advance, say the dealers.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The most alarming feature of the foot and mouth disease, department of agriculture experts say is the fact that the epidemic has spread to the western grazing lands. Iowa, one of the big grazing states, is already quarantined.

Trenton, Nov. 9.—The foot and mouth disease has made its appearance in Jersey. Twelve states are now affected by the epidemic.

FEDERATION OF LABOR COMMENDS LEGISLATION

(By International News Service)

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—Declaring that the "power to declare war must be put in the hands of the people or chosen representatives, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor made its report to the thirty-fourth convention covered here today. Referring to the conflict in Europe the report says: "Wars cease only when society is convinced that human life is really sacrificed and sensibilities aroused for protecting lives."

The report declares the greatest victory secured by labor last year was the amendment of the labor section of the Clayton anti-trust act, and commends part of the measure, referring to the amendment introduced by Senator Cumming, which asserts "that the labor of humans is not commodities or articles of commerce."

Martial Law Proclaimed in Constantinople, Confirming the Former Report of a Revolt Against the War Party in That City—Many Turks Arrested and Some Shot—Next Big Naval Battle Is Imminent, Russian and Turkish Fleets Sailing to Meet Each Other—Asia Minor Towns Bombarded by the Russians and Four Turkish Transports Sunk.

(By International News Service)

Petrograd, Nov. 9.—It was officially stated today that the German invaders in northwestern Poland have been driven back to East Prussia and that Russian territory has been cleared of Germans, except the extreme southwestern part of Russian Poland where the invaders strive to hold their positions.

Success against the Ottomans in Turkish Armenia is reported.

Pursuing the Germans

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters yesterday:

"On the East Prussian front our troops have dislodged the Germans from the region of Wirballen, which was strongly fortified, and have proceeded as far as Stalluponen (16 miles east-northeast of Gumbinnen). In the region of Rominten Forest and Lyck our troops continue to press on the heels of the rear guards of the enemy.

"On the left bank of the Vistula our cavalry has penetrated German territory, damaging the railway near Pleschen Station to the northwest of Kalisz.

12,000 Prisoners Taken

"On the roads to Cracow on November 6 we attacked the Austrian rear guards along the Nida river and the next day were operating on the river Nidzyea.

"In Galicia our troops are continuing their effective movement. In the latest engagements on the San river we capeured 125 officers and 12,000 soldiers, as well as rapid firers and munitions of war. South of Przemysl, on November 6, we took more than a thousand prisoners.

Turkish Facts Crumble

Athens, Nov. 9.—The Turkish forts Sedil and Bahr Koumkale, in the western end of the Darnanells, are crumbling under the bombardment of the British and French warships, says a wireless. Explosions have taken place inside one fort.

Revolt in Constantinople

Constantinople, Nov. 9.—Martial law has been proclaimed here. Many arrests have been made and seven prisoners were executed.

The foregoing confirms the report of revolt in Constantinople.

Next Big Naval Battle

London, Nov. 9—The next big naval battle is expected in the Black sea in a few hours. The Turkish fleet escaped from the Bosphorous and the Russian fleet has left Sebastopol indicating an effort to stop Turkish attacks on Russian ports.

The Russians are active and have bombarded two Asia Minor towns and sunk four Turkish transports, one carrying troops.

Turks Invade Egypt

Rome, Nov. 9.—The Ottoman embassy officially states that the Turks have invaded Egypt and that the Russian ships in the Black sea were driven to shelter in Russian fortified ports.

It is expected that the Egyptians will join the Turks and fight the British.

Conditions of Surrender of Germans in China

(By International News Service)

Tokio, Nov. 9.—The final meeting of the Japanese and German representatives to arrange the details of surrender of Kiao Chau was held today. The commander of the British ships which assisted in the bombardment agrees to any conditions that suit the Japanese.

The Japs will take possession of Kiao Chau tomorrow and will repair the fortress at Taing Tao, parts of which were demolished by Jap howitzers.

The terms prove that Governor General Wardock and all Germans shall be war prisoners and all property is to be handed over to the Japs.

The Japs casualties in the final assault were 426.

Mastriano and Caro Sentenced to the Pen

Ralph Mastriano and Paul Caro, convicted of murder in the second degree in connection with the killing of Antonio Matafiro on the West Side, were sentenced in this morning's session of court by Judge Bell. The former was given a minimum sentence of five years and a maximum of eight years in the Western penitentiary. Caro's sentence was for a term of from fifteen to eighteen years.

The murder occured on the West Side early last summer. Both of the convicts were unnerved by the sentence and big tears rolled down over their cheeks after they had learned their fate.

Theodore Zimmerman, a thirteen year old juvenile prisoner, who was arrested in July for breaking into several stores, was sent to the Glen Mills reformatory. Several attempts have been made since his arrest to find a home for the boy, but they have all been unsuccessful because of his uncontrolable nature.

Eliza Turner was also committed to the Glen Mills reformatory because her parents were unable to control her.

For a two-year-old the Washington party was quite frisky at the recent election in this state, carrying thirteen counties outright and making an excellent showing in many other counties.

Another Hall of political fame has been demolished in the defeat of the Penrose candidate for state senator and the election of the Washington-Democratic candidate in the Twenty-sixth district.

One schoolmaster in the White House in a century is quite sufficient, thank you; therefore the suggestion of Dr. Brumbaugh as the Republican candidate in 1916 isn't meeting with much favor.

We suggest that George Bernard Shaw and Herman Ridder fight it out with Krupp guns and cease to weary the American people with their newspaper controversies. It will be noticed that neither of these patriots is on the firing line in Europe.

A committee of suffragists visited the mayor of Philadelphia the other day and scolded him for his alleged failure to do what the women wanted done. The way to kill womans suffrage movement in this state is to send thoughtless women on committee to interview statesmen.

Republican newspapers of the better class are now advising the next legislature to carry out the pledges given by Dr. Brumbaugh during the campaign. Those papers should direct their appeal to the boss of the legislature, Boies Penrose. But Penrose made no pledges—that he intends to keep.

RIDDER'S NEUTRALITY

Herman Ridder, editor of the Staats Zeitung, published in New York city, in an open communication to a clergyman in Ohio, explains why he is trying to convince American citizens that the kaiser of Germany is entitled to the friendship of neutral nations. Ridder quotes the admonition of President Wilson to the people of the United States to maintain neutrality during the European war, and says that the effect of this advice was destroyed by the anti-German sentiment which was fostered by England and which found vent in American newspapers.

Ridder is mistaken. The American people made up their minds that the kaiser was in the wrong when the ordered the destruction of Belgium, and what the newspapers said merely strengthened the belief in the United States that the war lord must be held responsible for the beginning of the war as he is responsible for the brutality which has attended the conflict. No sane, educated and civilized American could regard with favor the violation by the kaiser of the pledge he had given that Belgium's neutrality should be respected.

The Zeitung editor says hundreds of thousands of Americans think as he does, which is possible, but there are several millions of Americans who, reading of the ruthless destruction of Belgium, the levying of tribute upon Brussels, the dropping of bombs on towns the inhabitants of which were not engaged in war and by which women and children were killed and other acts of the German kaiser, disagree with Herr Hidder. These millions of Americans also blame the kaiser for sending the best manhood of Germany to be slaughtered in a war, the object of which is commercial aggression and spoliation.

A DIVIDED DEMOCRACY

Now that the smoke of the political battle has passed away the two Democratic factions in this state have inaugurated the usual post-election alteration as to which wing of the party played traitor at the polls. The election returns would seem to indicate that a large number of Ryan Democrats voted for Penrose, some of them because they have always been friendly to the Penrose machine, and others because they would not support A. Mitchell Palmer, the Pennsylvania distributor of federal patronage under the present national administration.

It is stated that the old guard will endeavor to wrest control of the Democratic party in this state from the reorganizers. The poor showing made by Palmer in the recent election is seized upon by the reactionaries as good and sufficient cause for demanding that the party shall be turned over to them. But as Palmer holds the tickets to the pie counter the effort to oust him from the position of boss of the Democratic party is not likely to prove successful. The Ryan Democrats lack the ammunition to carry on the siege against Palmerism.

Of Interest to Workingmen.

For $1,000,000 invested in liquor 77 men are employed; for $1,000,000 invested in iron 248 men are employed; for $1,000,000 invested in the paper industry 367 are employed; $1,000,000 invested in leather calls for 469 men; in textiles, for 578; in lumber, for 579. It is seen, therefore, that the same amount of money invested in productive and constructive industries employs five times as many workmen as does the liquor industry. If the brewery and distillery be converted into bona fide manufactories, will it hurt or help the community?

Business Helped.

Instead of "hurting business," the nation-wide adoption of the liquor traffic would help business. The statement is made—and it is not overdrawn—that to "divide the money now spent in saloons among the twenty leading necessaries of life would require to manufacture them $400,000,000 more raw material than is now used in the manufacture of drink, and would give employment to 1,000,347 more men."

No Saloon Money in Theirs.

Writing from Emporia, Kansas, Walt Mason says in Colliers': "It is a favorite claim of the saloon men that they support the schools, their license money usually going to the school fund. The answer to this is that Emporia has just built a high school costing $135,000—which is going some for a town of 10,000 people. All the grade schools are housed in handsome buildings, the best teachers obtainable are hired, and none of them has to sue for his wages."

"Peg O' My Heart"

There are few dramatic offerings that can boast of a two years continuous run on Broadway, but "Peg O' My Heart," in which Doris Moore is now appearing for her second year is one of these. "Peg O' My Heart" will be the attraction at the New opera house on Friday evening. This is a play that has a plausible story in which laughter and tears are deftly mingled and has also, for its central character, one of the sweetest heroines. "Peg" is an unspoiled, irresponsible bit of a girl whom chance throws in the way of a haughty, unnatural family. They are so unlike her that she is made very unhappy, but in the last act, through the man who has won her love, her smiles return. Seats now on sale.

Good Roads Congress to Meet at Atlanta, Ga.

(By International News Service)

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 9—About five thousand men interested in good roads are here today for the sessions of the fourth American Road congress, which will continue throughout the week. There was a large amount of enthusiasm observable about the places where the delegates congregated. Probably no state was not represented. Atlanta has made elaborate arrangements for entertaining her visitors. The city has been decorated at great expense.

Forty-seven national and state road associations are taking part in the congress, prominent being the American Highway association, the American Automobile association, the American Bar association, the American Banker's association and the national civil service reform league.

Many railroads have put on special trains for the congress and the good roads of Georgia have been tested by hundreds of motor cars bearing the delegates here.

Besides the addresses and discussions there are many social features and exhibitions covering 40,000 square feet of floor space. The U. S. government exhibit comprises accurate models of every type of road from the imperial roads of ancient Rome to the modern boulevard and county market road.

Among those expected to address the congress are Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern railway; L. W. Page, director of the U. S. office of public roads; U. S. Senator J. H. Bankhead; Representative Dorsey W. Shackleford; Representative Wm. P. Dorland, and many state commissioners of highways.

This afternoon Governor and Mrs. Slaton gave a reception in the Georgia state capital to the delegates, visitors and their families. All the Atlanta clubs are keeping open house for the delegates.

This is the first meeting of the American Road congress in the South and is a recognition of the great energy and progress that has been made in that section in the movement for improved roads. In 1913, about $40,000,000 was expended by southern states on their public roads, in addition to the labor of thousands of state convicts. Georgia alone had her entire convict force numbering nearly 5,000 engaged in road construction

The tremendous importance of guarding against extravagance in road expenditures is shown by the fact that while a recent report of the census bureau indicates that the total bonded debt of the 48 states last year was $419,157,000, in the single year of 1912 the states spent about $142,000,000 on roads. The total indebtedness had been accumulating for years, and yet in one year an amount equal to about one-third was spent on roads. This subject will be dealt with exhaustively at the congress.

One of the principal results hoped for by the management of the congress will be the establishment of sate railway departments in the six southern states, which have thus far failed to adopt the plan of state supervision, namely Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, Mississippi and Texas. Aside from those six states only Indiana and Montana have failed to establish state higway departments for educational or constructive work.

Henderson's Corsets

Are Good Every Day of the Year and for Every Occasion

Hardly a day passes that we do not receive some favorable comment in regard to these corsets and it is the verdict of the ladies of Clearfield and vicinity that no better or more stylish corsets can be secused for the money. Women of discretion buy corsets where the stock comprises many different models, for so doing they know they can be properly fitted to a model that will suit their indiuidual figure.

Our stock of Henderson Bac't and Front Laced Corsets is unusually complete and includes all of the various seasonable models.

We call your special attention to Henderson Corset, Style 504, which is unquestionably one of the newest and most stylish designs that has been offered this season. It is made of coutil, has a medium low bust, without boning over hips and is so designed to give the new natural figure lines so much in vogue. An undeniably handsome garment that appeals to every woman of excellent dress attainments. Made for average figures.

WAR INCIDENTS ON LAND AND SEA THROW LIGHT ON EUROPEAN STRIFE

Naval Foes Too Strong, German Officer Cannot Pity Drowning.

Wounded Briton Wakes to Find Himself Buried In Pile of Dead.

A LETTER from an American official in Germany tells of a conversation with Lieutenant Weddigen, the commander of the submarine which sank the British cruisers Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy and, according to reports in German papers, also the cruiser Hawke.

Lieutenant Weddigen almost spared the Cressy, feeling strongly against sending this last ship to the bottom because it was the only thing to save the men from the other cruisers, who were struggling in the water.

Lieutenant Weddigen said that through the periscope of the submarine he observed both other ships sink, with the Cressy alongside for rescue. The havoc appalled him and he almost determined to let the Cressy stay afloat. He was about to leave the periscope and retire when his second in command, who was also shocked, reminded Weddigen, "You know we have four navies fighting us."

Thereupon Weddigen went back to the periscope, made his observation, and sent the torpedoes which finished the Cressy.

School Work Amid Shell Fire.

The director of the gymnasium at Altkirch (Upper Alsace) writes to the Muenchner Zeitung as an eyewitness of an examination held at the gymnasium while the town and the gymnasium itself were being bombarded by French artillery. He says: "At 10 o'clock there began at the gymnasium the emergency examination (Notprufung), which was to last till 2:30. The building is situated on a height near the railroad station, and the fire from the French artillery batteries above Karsbach, near Barlutte, against the German position at the railroad station, passed directly over the gymnasium. A misdirected German shrapnel found its way into the Untersekunda and the physical laboratory, causing considerable destruction, but fortunately injuring no one. The examination went on quietly all the same. Of the three boys examined two passed through the fire of the hostile forces all the way to Muelhausen, a distance of seventeen kilometers; the third boy turned back, and I do not know what became of him."

Soldier's Tribute to Nurses.

"In my ward, where I lay, the women who minister to me and the others are renewing the miracle of evangelical charity," says a letter from a wounded French soldier. "Only this time it is not a ceremony, but a necessity. They washed us when we came—our faces, our hands, our feet—and brought us back to human semblance from underneath clots of mud.

"For eleven days now I am here. We all are comfortable. We have the attendance of the best physicians in Havre, and we have, above all, the care of the Catholic Sisters of Charity.

"How shall I praise enough these angels on earth? Of infinite goodness are they, without sentimentality or affected sensibility. So I have seen them where death and destruction abounded, and so I see them here—the same. In these women one finds no romantic goodness that is in reality only selfishness projected for self satisfaction. One finds the goodness of great souls; the goodness of a pity that is divine."

When He Saw the Dead First.

In the same letter, written to his fiancee, the wounded Frenchman said: "I thought of you and then I thought of my first day of war on the crest above Flachslanden, in Alsace. I saw there my first dead—Bavarian dragoons. My God! How big they looked sleeping on the gentle slopes! Since then I have seen so many dead my eyes are seared. Our French look so small and quiet, after they cease crying out in pain and die. Their knapsacks are little. Their blue overcoats twist about them in such a ludicrous way! I have gotten so when I see dead men I let my eyes fall on their hands—the hands that are always stretched so wide as if they sought something. And on them I see so many little gold bands that are wedding rings."

"Big Berthas" Fire Twenty-three and One-half Miles.

The range of the famous German 42 centimeter guns is fixed at thirty-eight kilometers (twenty-three and one-half miles) by a Norwegian engineer who witnessed the operations of the German army in Belgium and reported thereon in the Aftonce Tidende of Bergen of Oct. 3.

"Approach nearer than one kilometer to the huge guns was forbidden," he wrote. "The most disagreeable feature of my sojourn in Villerorde was the tremendous cannon thunder, especially when in spells lasting half an hour the 42 centimeter guns found the range for their huge projectiles. The noise was like the bursting of a volcano; the whole city shook to its foundations. The range of these guns is thirty-eight kilometers. The fire is directed with the aid of captive balloons fastened to automobiles and constantly changing their positions."

When the Hindu Soldiers Charged.

A dispatch to the London Daily Telegraph, dated "Northern France," relates the first instance of the British Indian troops coming into action.

"It was at La Bassee," says the dispatch, "when by a great effort the Germans carried the British trenches and the position looked dangerous. An avalanche of the enemy poured through, evidently supposing that the way was open to the coast. They had a rude awakening.

"The supports of the British line were the Indian troops, who had been thirsting to prove their quality. It was a bayonet affair, and the German advance was beaten and broken. The Indians ran through them, using the steel in their own workmanlike fashion and thrusting the foe back to receive the right and left fire of the British infantry, who awaited their coming.

"Not only did the Indians regain the lost trenches, but they pursued the enemy down the hill until their officers thought it prudent to recall them."

Frenchwomen Give Blood.

An appeal was issued by the military medical authorities at Lyons for volunteers for blood transfusion. It said:

"There are many wounded who are so exhausted from loss of blood that the only chance of saving their lives is by prompt transfusion from the veins of a healthy, strong, living man or woman. Those who wish to offer their blood for such transfusions are invited to give their names to the Hotel Dieu."

Within a short time after the appearance of the notice 120 names of volunteers had been registered, with women appearing conspicuously in the list, which included all classes of society. So prompt was the response that Dr. Carrel, pathologist of the Rockefeller institute and now head of one of the Lyons hospitals, was able to save several patients at once.

Alive In Pile of Dead.

A wounded British soldier tells a story of an experience which recalls the grim experience of Balzac's Colonel Chabert, and which also illustrates the severity of the fighting.

This soldier said he remembered the start of a fierce fight in the trenches. Then his mind became a blank for many hours. When he recovered his senses it was morning, and he had an awful feeling of suffocation. When he tried to move he realized that he was in a trench, buried beneath a pile of German and British dead.

The enemy had retired temporarily and eventually the soldier was able to crawl to the next line of trenches, which were occupied by his comrades. Then he was sent to the rear.

Having Awful Time, but Happy.

Lieutenant Thomas of the Third Cheshires writes a friend he is having an awful time—"about 1,000 times worse than the infernal regions." His grub is dog biscuits and bully beef; his bed is the trenches and open fields; he is often in mud to his knees; the weather is rotten, and if he gets out alive he will be surprised. Yet he says, "I am well and happy."

Back to Days of Armor.

The Paris Journal d'Information states that the French infantry have recently gained much ground in the Argonne region through the use of steel breastplates, which, though unable to resist point blank bullets, are nevertheless impenetrable at a range which permits troops to pause before the last rush with the bayonet.

The Journal de Rennes announces that the Russian government decided to adopt the breastplate at the outbreak of the war and placed immense orders with a factory at St. Hilaire de Harconet which had the exclusive manufacturing rights.

The French government also has now ordered large quantities and has released the reservists employed in the factory, which is busy night and day.

Birds Blamed For Hog Cholera.

Wild pigeons and other birds are blamed by the farmers in three counties surrounding Joliet, Ill., for the loss of more than $75,000 worth of hogs and the spread of hog cholera over that part of the county. Farmers are adopting desperate measures to check the disease. Parties of hunters have been organized for the purpose of shooting the pigeons, which fly from farm to farm, spreading the germs of the epidemic with great rapidity. "Birds are one of the most prolific sources of infection for hogs," said Dr. Houck of the United States bureau of animal industry.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Flood and Fire.

Screaming to make himself heard above the roar of the deluge, Barcus clambered in Alan's ear:

"That devil! He's found the reserve—opened the sluicegates—turned in into that shaft! We're done for!"

Alan had no argument with which to answer him. Silently getting on his feet, silently he groped for Rose in the darkness, momentarily becoming more aware as the fall of water shut out the light, and drew her away with him, up the slight incline that led back to the bulkhead.

The hour that followed lived ever in his memory as an hour in hell. No ray of hope lightened its impenetrable blackness. He could say nothing to comfort the girl; bravely though she strove to keep up her heart, time and again she shook in his arms like a mad thing, when panic dread caught her by the neck as a terrier catches a rat. While there, in the darkness, like so many penned animals trapped in a sewer . . .

The water mounted rapidly. Within five minutes it drove them back to the elbow in the tunnel; within ten it lapped their ankles as they lingered there, debating which was the greater peril: to advance or to stand fast and let the flooding tide snuff out the fires of life. To return to the neighborhood of the bulkhead was to court the death indicated by the fuse and the keg of blasting powder . . .

All at a sudden the thought crossed Alan's mind that Marrophat had arranged the latter solely to keep them away from the bulkhead. Now that he thought of it, he felt certain that the powder room had been deliberately abandoned to him by Jimmy.

Probably, then, the keg and fuse were but stage properties—or possibly . . .

Whether or no, was death in one form preferable to the other?

He was decidedly of the opinion that it were better to be extinguished once and for all time, in the space of a second, annihilated by an explosion, than to die thus limitlessly.

On this consideration, he drew Rose with him back to the bulkhead.

When they had been some fifteen minutes beside the bulkhead, the water mounted the head of a slight rise perhaps ten feet behind them, and poured down in ever deeper volumes to break up against the barrier.

It was waist deep, however, before they retreated to the head of that rise.

Half an hour later it was waist deep there, on the highest spot in the tunnel.

In fifteen minutes more it had reached their chins. And they stood with head against the roof of the tunnel.

Holding Rose close to him, Alan kissed her lips, that were as cold as death.

Then, fumbling under water, he found the hand of the man at his side.

The water lapped his lips like a cold hand . . .

In the tunnel that branched off from the main shaft, beyond the bulkhead, some thirty minutes before this junction, a candle had guttered in its stick, and carelessly thrust into the wall by Marrophat's lieutenant, and guttering, had dropped a flaming wick into a little heap of bone-dry debris. This had spread, licked hungrily at the timbering that upheld the falls of the tunnel. The timbering caught fire without delay. In a space of time incredibly brief the flames were spreading right and left, the tunnel was a vault of blistering fury.

Alan Negotiates for the Barrel.

As Alan said his last mute farewell to Rose and Barcus, the fire spread out in the bottom of the shaft and invaded the powder room.

Alan had guessed aright at Marrophat's design: the keg of blasting powder was less than an eighth full; its explosion could not possibly have effected the cave-in Alan had at first believed.

But what Marrophat had overlooked was the presence in the keg of some twenty pounds of dynamite, stashed by miners at work in that section of the abandoned workings.

When the blasting fuse dropped sparks into the blasting powder the latter exploded right willingly and the dynamite took fire and exploded in its turn without the least delay.

The resultant detonation was terrific. The bulkhead was crushed in like an eggshell barrier. Part of the walls fell in, but the tunnels and shaft remained intact. The released flood streamed out and spread swiftly to the farthest recesses of the burning tunnel. Dense clouds of steam filled that place of terror as the fires were extinguished.

Swept with the stream as it poured out of the tunnel, Alan contrived throughout to retain his hold round the waist of Rose. Barcus shot past him unseen in the darkness. It was not until Alan had contrived to catch an unburned timber and stay himself and his almost witless burden beneath the mouth of the shaft that he discovered Barcus alive, if almost unrecognizable in his mask of mold and soot, battling back toward the shaft against the kneedeep tide.

Half-blinded and stifled as he was by the reek of steam and powder fumes, Alan struggled with himself until his wits were passably clear.

Immediately before him dangled the hoisting bucket and rope.

Surrendering the care of Rose to Barcus, Alan climbed into the bucket and stared upward, examining the walls of the shaft for a way to the top.

There was none other than the most difficult; gaps too great to be bridged by climbing showed in the wooden ladders.

The one feasible route was via the rope. And there was nobody at the top to work the windlass—and Alan hoped there would be nobody to oppose his essay.

He addressed himself to the task without murmuring—lifted himself up on the rope, wound it round one leg and began that heartbreaking climb.

How he accomplished it he never knew. That it must be accomplished was his one, all-absorbing thought. And somehow, by some almost superhuman effort, it was eventually accomplished.

He arrived at the top of the shaft far too exhausted to show surprise when, failing in half-fainting condition within two feet of the brink, he saw Judith Trine running like mad across the clearing.

But without her aid he would not within hours have been able to work the windlass and lift Rose and Barcus to the surface.

CHAPTER XLVII.

The Last Warning.

In the chill, violet-shadowed dusk of that clear evening, a chap-fallen motor car crept sluggishly into the little mountain town of Mesquite at the heels of two mutinous mules, driven by a chauffeur who steered with one hand while the other flourished a crackling whip-lash over the backs of its sole motive power.

Its one passenger, a cripple as helpless as the car itself, huddled in a corner of the rear seat, saluted Mesquite with a snarl. Though he was in sore need of such rude comforts as the town stood prepared to afford him, his demeanor toward it was that of one who suffers an indignity rather than begs accommodation.

And now, as the car crawled to a pause before the Mountain house—Mesquite's one caravanserai—and Mesquite itself, to the last flea-bitten hound, gathered round to view this wonder, Mr. Trine's indignation and chagrin distilled words of poisonous import.

Far from resenting this, Mesquite, pipe in mouth, hands in pockets, admired and applauded, and rather resented the change that befell when two other strangers (whose earlier appearance in town had helped make that one day memorable beyond all others in Mesquite's history) charged out of the Mountain house and interrupted the elder devil with cries of greeting and jubilation.

The leader of these answered to the name of Marrophat; his companion was a person named Jimmy. Mesquite acquired this information through paying close attention to the substance of their communications with the cripple. More than this, however, it learned little. Something seemed to have been accomplished by the two, something that was highly gratifying to Seneca Trine: for he was chuckling almost mirthfully when lifted from the car and carried into the hotel.

What passed between the trio after they disappeared behind that bedchamber door Mesquite could by no means guess. But that a celebration of some sort was in progress was evidenced by the frequency with which Marrophat and Jimmy called on the bar for more liquid refreshment.

And toward midnight one belated Mesquite paused in the street outside the Mountain house for one last curious stare at the lighted windows of Mr. Trine's quarters.

He saw, clearly silhouetted against the glowing oblong of the window, the Mephistophelean profile of Seneca Trine, distorted with a grimace of the cruelest joy that ever heart of man conceived. He saw Marrophat approach his master with a drunken swagger and a speech which, though indistinguishable to the unseen auditor, unquestionably afforded both of the other men ample excuse for ecstatic glee. Toward its conclusion Mr. Marrophat apparently capped the peak of jubilation by fumbling in his coat pocket and bringing forth something which strongly resembled a single playing card.

Now when he had contrived to master his mirth, the cripple made a gesture which eloquently abolished this card, a gesture which said quite plainly: "All that is finished. The thing has served its purpose! To hell with it!"

Whereupon, with a smart jerk of his wrist, Mr. Marrophat sent the card spinning and sailing out through the open window to lose itself in the night.

The watcher didn't see it fall, and though he spent an unconscionable time searching for it in the deep dust of the roadway, he went his way in the end with curiosity unsated: Fate had reserved that card for a higher purpose.

It Was a Trey of Hearts.

Undisturbed, it lay where it had fallen, face upward, not a dozen feet from the front door of the Mountain house, until another day dawned on Mesquite.

Then, in the clear light of that dawn, four more strangers straggled into town—two weary and haggard men, two footsore and bedraggled women. One of these last was dressed in a suit of man's clothing, much the worse for wear.

At sight of the Mountain house the party betrayed slight symptoms of a more cheerful spirit: rejoicing in its promise of food and drinks and beds withal wherein to sleep, the four quickened their steps.

But of a sudden one of the women—she who wore the garments of her sex—paused, uttered a low cry, a-thrill with terror, and clutching the arm of the man nearest her, pointed down to the card that stared up from the dust at her feet.

It was a trey of hearts.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Full Flight.

"Oh, what can it mean?" Rose whispered brokenly, clinging to her lover's arm. "Surely you don't think . . . Surely, it must be accidental . . . Surely it can't mean—"

"I'm afraid it does," Alan Law responded gravely, eyeing the front of the Mountain house. "Our luck holds consistently—that's all. It wouldn't be us if we didn't pick out the one place where Marrophat and Jimmy chose to stop over night. Fortunately, it's early; I doubt they're up. With half a show we ought to be able to find some way of putting a good distance between us and this town before they wake . . . . . Tom!"

But Mr. Barcus was already at his elbow, in thorough sympathy with Alan's interpretation of the significance to be attached to the card that trembled in Rose's hand.

"Sharp's the word!" he agreed. "And there's a motor car over there, in front of the blacksmith's. Probably we can hire her—"

"Trine's car!" Alan ejaculated, swinging round and recognising the automobile at a glance. "Then he's here, as well!"

"Looks like it," Barcus admitted. "But so much the better. We'll just naturally take the dern' thing off his hands, and I'll bet a dollar there isn't another car within a radius of fifty miles! We'll be well out of these giddy mountains long before he finds anything to chase us with."

But his confidence was demonstrated to be premature by the discovery, which rewarded the first cursory examination, that the car was very thoroughly out of commission.

Two minutes later, however, their earnest inquiries elicited the fact that, although Barcus was justified in his surmise that the neighboring country was poverty-stricken in respect of motor cars, Mesquite itself boasted two motorcycles whose owners were not indifferent to a chance to sell them second-hand at a considerable advance on the retail list price of the machines, when new.

And thus it was that, within ten minutes from Rose's discovery of that chance-flung warning in the dust, the party was again in rapid motion.

His beauty sleep disturbed by the departure of the machine bearing Barcus and Judith, Seneca Trine roused on an elbow and looked out of the window just in time to see the second motorcycle gathering momentum, Alan steering, Rose in the seat behind.

Sixty seconds later a flaunting banner of dust was all that remained to remind Mesquite that romance had passed that way—that, and a series of passionate screams emanating from the bedchamber of Seneca Trine, where the cripple lay possessed by seven devils of insensate rage.

His screams brought attendance: but it was a matter of many precious minutes before his demands could be met and Marrophat and Jimmy roused from their crapulous slumbers in adjoining chambers; and half an hour elapsed before the chauffeur, roused from his own well-earned rest, succeeded in convincing the pair that pursuit with the motor car was out of the question.

But the devil takes care of his own: within another half hour what seemed to be sheer, bull-headed, dumb luck brought a casual automobile to Mesquite—a two-seated, high-power racing machine of the latest and speediest pattern, driven by two irresponsible wayfarers who proved only too susceptible to Marrophat's offer of double the cost of the car—f. o. b Detroit—for its immediate surrender.

The two piled out promptly enough: Marrophat and Jimmy jumped in: Trine from his bedroom window sped them on their murderous mission with a blast of blasphemy.

It must have been an hour later when Alan, checking his motorcycle as it surmounted the summit of a long upgrade, looked back and discovered, several miles distant on the far-flung windings of the mountain road, a small crimson shape that ran like a mad thing tirelessly pursued by a cloud of tawny dust like a golden ghost.

A motor car, beyond all question, and one of uncommon road-devouring quality; it might or might not contain Marrophat and Jimmy, once more in pursuit. Whether or not, bitter experience had long since educated Alan in the gentle art of taking no chances.

Though it was his life that they sought so pertinaciously, no later than yesterday (and then by no means for the first time), they had proved that if Rose were with Alan they would include her ruthlessly in whatsoever scheme they might contemplate for his personal extermination.

Nor would Tom Barcus be exempt, if they were caught in company—though Judith might be, in view of Marrophat's infatuation for the girl.

These two were far ahead, out of sight, indeed; and must somehow be overtaken and warned—no easy matter, since the machine which bore them was, if anything, faster than Alan's, just as the racing automobile was faster than either.

Alan kept his gaze steadfast to the road before them, daring not once to look up and round or back.

So sinuous and meandering was its course, indeed, that Alan seldom could see a hundred yards of it ahead, but must pelt on in panic flight, hoping for the best—that Judith and Barcus would soon show up in front, that something might happen to hinder the pursuit—never knowing whether the latter lost or gained.

And thus catastrophe befell . . .

Round the swelling bosom of a wooded mountainside the motorcycle swept like a hunted hare, and without the least warning came upon Barcus and Judith, dismounted, Barcus bending over his cycle and tinkering with its motor.

For one horripilating instant collision seemed unavoidable. Barcus and Judith and the motorcycle occupied most of the width of the road; there was little room between them and the declivity, less between them and the forest. To try to pass them on the latter side would be only to dash his brains out against the trees; while to make the attempt on the outside would be to risk leaving the road altogether and dashing off into space . . .

And it was impossible to stop the cycle—so brief was all his warning. In desperation Alan chose the outside—the road; and for the space of a single heartbeat thought that he might possibly make it. But with the next realized that he would not—seeing the front wheel swing off over the lip of the slope.

At this he acted sharply and upon sheer instinct. As the cycle left the road altogether he risked a broken knee by releasing his grasp of the handlebars and straightening out his leg and driving it down forcibly against the roadbed. The effect of this was to lift him bodily from the saddle: the machine shot from beneath him like some strange projectile hurled from the bore of a great gun, and Rose crashed against him in the same fraction of a second.

Headlong they plunged as one down the hillside, struck its shelving surface a good twenty feet from the brink of the road, and flying apart tumbled their separate ways down the remainder of the drop and into the friendly shelter of the underbrush.

Something nearly miraculous saved them whole. Beyond a few scratches and bruises and a severe shaking up, they escaped unharmed. And they were picking themselves up and regaining their breath and re-collecting their scattered wits when, with impetus no less terrific than their own had been, the pursuing motor car swung round the bend and hurled itself directly at the two who remained upon the road above.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNESY

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Slats is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

CLEARFIELD H. S. WINS FROM THE DUBOIS ELEVEN

Clearfield has every right to feel exceedingly proud of its 1914 high school football team. A great many citizens have felt that way for some time, but just now they feel doubly so, for on Saturday, at the Driving park, the local boys administered a decisive defeat to DuBois high, the first gridiron contest between the schools to be won by C. H. S. in almost a decade and a half. The score was 13-0. There was not a single unpleasant incident to mar the glory of the victory, the decisions of the officials and the conduct of players and spectators being exceedingly satisfactory to the management of both teams.

Owing to the ancient rivalry between the two towns represented and the fact that this game marked a renewal of athletic relations between the schools after a three-year period of estrangement, the crowd at the game was the largest of the season. Ideal football weather prevailed.

As to the game itself, it was, in the opinion of those who have been following the local team, the closest and the best game of football ever witnessed in Clearfield. Every inch of ground gained by either side was secured only after strenuous playing which at all times was aggresive, but never unnecessarily rough.

During the first period the ball exchanged hands several times, but neither side was able to advance it within striking distance of the opponents' goal. It was not until late in the second period that Clearfield, after several times rushing the ball to the DuBois 15-yard line, sent Bell crashing through the line for the first score of the game. McQuillen failed to kick the goal.

The second touchdown for the local boys came in the third period when, after rushing the ball down the field on tackle bucks and end runs, Captain Stewart tore through the DuBois forwards and placed the ball behind the goal posts. W. Flegal kicked the goal, making the score 13 to 0.

The local team to a man played the game for all that was in them, and it can hardly be said that anyone did better than another. The team went into the game confident that they were a better team, and this mental attitude went a long way toward winning the victory, and proving beyond a doubt that they were champions of Clearfield county and contenders for championship honors of the section.

The team which represented DuBois was one of the cleanest and strongest ever turned out by the school and went into the game confident of winning, even making boast that they would score at least 75 points.

"Meg O' the Mountains," a special two-reel feature play telling of domestic life in Carolina in which a mad girl plays an important part. The story is full of interest.

"The Old Maid's Baby" with John Bunny, a fun-provoking picture in which the troubles of an old maid who tries to pass of a pet hog as a baby while on the train are shown.

There will be six reels at the Globe tonight, including the interesting European War specials.

"MY LADY RAFFELS" WILL BE AT THE OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT

"My Lady Raffles" in "The Mysterious Hand". From a boarding-house slavey to a cultured, beautiful woman—a lady raffles. The case of this girl is strange and alluring. In a mystifying crime, she pits herself against a famous detective. What happens?

"Their Vacation" is an amusing Joker comedy at the opera house this evening.

WALSH MAY MANAGE SOX.

"Big Ed" Walsh, former star spitball twirler of the Chicago White Sox, who, it is rumored, has been chosen by Owner Charley Comiskey to supplant Jimmy Callahan as manager of the team. The failure of Callahan to keep the Sox at the heels of the Athletics caused him to fall into disfavor with the Chicago fans. This fact gives color to the rumor that Callahan will be ousted in favor of Walsh.

Oliver Typewriter Ribbons — the best on the market—may be had at the Clearfield Progress office. Any color of ribbon, price 60c. If by mail, remit 65c and ribbons will be forwarded promptly. tf.

Hello! Have you paid your income tax yet?

Orvis Ogden is framing his new house and the weather has been against him, as the wind has been very high the past two days.

Of course, you have been advised to do your Christmas shopping early. We have already delivered several parcels with instructions on out-side "Please do not open till Christmas". And, by the way, we delivered 10,052 pieces of mail during the month of October and collected nearly 1000 pieces. The department informs us that the postage cancelled on the mail carried by rural carriers will just about one-half pay their salaries, but the postage on my first, third, and fourth class amounted to $120, o mail delivered and $21 on collected. Second class goes by weight and as I do not know exact rate, do not know what the postage amounted to on it.

We mentioned in a former epistle that certain persons evidently came to town to get enthusiasm. Well, we saw one man who evidently got too much, as we saw him lying beside the road sleeping; and, take our word for it, a man sleeping off an overdose of "enthusiasm" is not a very edifying spectacle. Incidentally this was the morning after election. Wonder where he could have got it?

WAR WIND BLOWS GOOD TO AMERICA IN THE SHAPE OF ORDERS OF GOODS

Shoes and Other Supplies Demanded of Us by Fighting Nations.

Trouble With Us Is That We Are Too Rich, Says Thomas A. Edison.

"THE trouble with us is that we are too rich; too many of us have so much money we wouldn't know what to do with more if we had it. That's why we haven't more readily grasped the opportunities offered us through the European war." This was the opinion expressed by Thomas A. Edison in an interview in Cleveland.

At the same time there appeared in the New York Times articles showing orders given in America for war supplies and other materials by the warring nations of Europe. Some of the biggest of these are given here:

New England manufacturers of shoes have already booked orders for 2,200,000 pairs for export to the European belligerents. Negotiations are under way for further orders, but some manufacturers hesitate because the profit is hard to calculate.

France, which has already placed huge orders, desires hobnailed boots for her soldiers. These must be made by hand, and it is a question as to how expensive the hobnailing process will be. One manufacturer has installed special machinery for this purpose.

A company which received an order for 200,000 pairs for France recently has had the order increased to 500,000 pairs. It is debating whether to increase its facilities and accept an order for 1,000,000 pairs of boots. Another company is making 500,000 pairs of boots for Greece.

Boom In Leather Also.

There is a corresponding boom in leather. One company, with an annual turnover of $12,000,000, is running its factories day and night at 125 per cent capacity. Before the war it was operating at 40 per cent capacity. Most of the leather is for England and is to be made into boots there for the army. So far England has bought no boots in the United States, but is expected to place orders soon. Its demand for leather has put up the price 4 to 6 cents a foot.

Twenty thousand additional head of horses are to be purchased in Missouri and southern Illinois by agents of the British, French and Russian governments, according to reports in live stock circles in St. Louis. It is said that the agents of the various governments have been instructed to make the purchases.

A uniform price of $270 is being paid for each horse.

The French agents also have bought 200,000 barrels of flour and great quantities of other provisions in St. Louis, and orders have been placed with local shoe factories for thousands of pairs of shoes.

Germany Buys Horses.

The German government is said to be offering $600 to $800 a head for horses delivered in Germany.

War orders for clothing, trucks, harness, tinned meats, and the like in the Chicago and neighboring markets amount to between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000, and purchasing agents of the British and French governments are still buying. England has $3,000,000 gold in a Chicago bank to be used for purchases. The meat packers have enough European orders on hand to keep them running full time for a year.

The opposing governments have agents watching the purchases of each other in this market. They begin by apparently sincere correspondence about prices and quantities, but their queries invariably lead to details of transport. With this information their warships are kept on the lookout for shipments to hostile governments.

From Hartford, Conn., within a few weeks, 1,700 machine lathes of moderate capacity, such as twelve to fourteen inches, have been shipped to Europe. One thousand more of these lathes are required, the whole to cost $1,500,000. The order will exhaust the present stock of such lathes in the United States. Arms and cartridge plants are working overtime on machine guns, pistols and ammunition, and these eventually find their way to Europe, though the manufacturers deal only with their regular American agents.

The effect of the war upon Pacific coast canning is shown in a tabulation prepared in San Francisco by the chamber of commerce.

Barley this year was a bumper crop. The exports from San Francisco for the last three months reached the unprecedented total of 3,765,452 quintals, as against 382,891 for the corresponding period in 1913.

For canned fruits the figures are 789,038 cases this year, against 523,039 in 1913, and for canned salmon the tally stands 596,967 cases this year, 390,908 cases last year.

Big Order For Canned Meats.

An order for 15,000,000 pounds of canned meats, valued at $1,500,000, to go to Europe, has been received by a packing company of Oklahoma City.

Additional orders for dry salt pork amount to more than the supply in sight.

While admitting the existing depression in the iron and steel trade due to the war in Europe, Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation, addressing the American Iron and Steel Institute, in session in Birmingham, Ala., declared himself an optimist and predicted a considerable improvement in the next three months.

Further, he declared that this country, with its vast wealth and resources, should become the financial, industrial and commercial center of the world. Opportunities, he added, never were better.

"Without particularizing," said the speaker, "it would seem safe to predict that in many important respects business conditions in the United States for the next three months at least will be better than they have been for the last three months. I do not hesitate to say, with emphasis, that the opportunity for success and progress in this country is greater than ever before."

War Loss Predicted.

Incidentally, in discussing the war and its effects, Judge Gary expressed the opinion that if the conflict should be maintained with its present violence for eighteen months the loss of life would be 4,000,000 and the property loss $35,000,000,000.

"Undoubtedly," he said, "it would be to the best interests of all the nations engaged in the present war and to the world at large if the integrity and geographical lines of each of these nations could be substantially preserved."

About 300 members of the Iron and Steel institute, of which Judge Gary is president, heard the address.

Discussing conditions in the iron and steel industry, Judge Gary said:

"I am an optimist in principle as well as in practice. There is always a bright side, although it may be temporarily obscured. However, nothing is to be gained by closing our eyes to well known and clearly recognized facts, and at present we are not very prosperous in our lines. This is reflected in the published reports of some of the larger companies. The president of one declares that 'earnings from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, 1914, on the tonnage produced have been at the smallest margin of profit since the formation of the company.' It is sufficient to say at this time that the volume and prices of iron and steel sold in this country were very low, comparatively speaking, during the months immediately prior to the commencement of the European war, and with respect to the volume, there have been substantial decreases since that time.

"But what of the future? We are always comforted by the fact that the productive capacity and actual production of wealth in the United States is growing year by year, and this ability to produce will not and cannot be diminished. Besides, at the present time the exports of a large variety of commodities are increasing. Although not equal to the volume reported just prior to the commencement of the war, they are yet much larger than just after the beginning of the war. This will have a material influence upon other lines. All are stimulated and brought into service."

EDISON'S "MORSE" BOTHERS.

Telegraph Operator Finds It Hard to Read His Dots and Dashes.

Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, who has been visiting scenes of his boyhood near Detroit, took a trip to Port Huron, Mich., and once more tried his hand at the operator's key. He even went so far as to take the wares from a newsboy and sell them among his friends.

As a boy Mr. Edison sold papers and worked as an operator for the same railroad over which he traveled to Port Huron. His last trip, however, was in a special train.

As the inventor passed through Mount Clemens he stepped into the telegraph operator's office and tapped off a message to his children in New Jersey. The message was interrupted, however. The Mount Clemens operator turned to Mr. Edison with a smile and said:

"An operator on the line is complaining. He says there is a boy on the wire whose practicing is gumming things up."

At Port Huron Mr. Edison's host insisted on equipping his guest with all the necessary equipment of a "news butcher."

Mr. Edison appeared to take keen delight in the situation and was soon selling fruit and candies to his friends. Gum brought as high as 50 cents a package, and when the inventor stepped off the train he poured the proceeds of his day's business into the hat of a grinning porter.

Cossack Cloak and Joffre Hat.

The Joffre hat and Cossack cloak are definite features of Paris winter fashions. The hat is made of dark velvet, is round and flat with a peak. The cloak is heavy and loose, ending at the knees, and gathered at the waist with a belt.

TURKEY STRONG ON BLACK SEA

Her Fleet on Inland Ocean Outweighs Russia's.

HAS ARMY OF MILLION.

Ottomans' Entry Into War May Bring About New Alignment of Powers, With Probabilities In Favor of Allies. Turks Have Long Been Favorable to the German Side.

The initial advantage on the Black sea apparently lies with Turkey in the opening of hostilities against Russia, according to observers. In addition to the battle cruiser Goeben, which has attained a speed of 27.2 knots and is one of the most formidable craft afloat, and the protected cruiser Breslau of a 26.9 knot record, Turkey has in the Black sea two battleships of Dreadnought class, four pre-Dreadnoughts, two swift cruisers and numerous destroyers and gunboats, many of them bought from Germany. This fleet includes these battleships:

Reshad-i-Hamis, 23,000 tons, 20 knots.

Birenzi Osman, 27,000 tons, 22 knots, bought from Brazil.

Khyer-ed-din Barbarossa and Torgut Reiss, 9,800 tons each, 17 knots, formerly German battleships, and two others of the same type.

Two cruisers, the Hamidieh and the Medjidieh, 3,800 tons, 22 knots.

Russia's Black Sea Fleet.

Russia's Black sea fleet consists of six pre-Dreadnought battleships, one protected cruiser, two armored gunboats and a number of old torpedo boats and gunboats.

Three Dreadnoughts are under construction, but may not be in commission for months.

If Portugal be counted, Turkey is the eleventh nation to be involved in the great European struggle. Her participation has been expected for weeks, and diplomats now say that Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria are likely to be added, and possibly Italy.

Notwithstanding the warnings of the allies, it has been deemed inevitable that Turkey would yield to German influence and join against Russia. Since the opening of the war 600 German officers have arrived in Turkey, as well as a large quantity of munitions of war, including some of the big siege guns. German guns were mounted in the Dardanelles forts and a German officer, Weber Pasha, placed in command. All the fortifications of the Bosporus and the Asia Minor coast have been overhauled and mines have been sown in Greek waters.

Lineup Will Favor Allies.

If the entrance of Turkey into the conflict embroils Italy and the other Balkan states, as expected, it will bring 3,371,000 additional men into battle, as well as three more navies. In this event the line up will probably be in favor of the allies.

Turkey, with an army on war footing figured at approximately 1,000,000, and a navy of thirty-five warships manned by 31,000 men, will thus contribute 1,031,000 men to the German cause.

The allies will profit to the extent of 210 warships and a total of 2,340,000 men contributed as follows: Italy—Army, 1,200,000; navy, 169 ships manned by 80,000. Greece—Army, 150,000; navy, forty-one ships, manned by 30,000. Bulgaria—Army, 380,000, and Roumania, army, 500,000. About Bulgaria's future moves there is much doubt, as she is still bitter against her enemies in the recent second Balkan war, and she may join Turkey.

Doubt About Goeben and Breslau.

Turkey mobilized her army early in August, supposedly with the moral support of the German government. It was thought the forces would be employed against Greece for the recovery of territory lost in the Balkan war. Greece bought the battleships Mississippi and Idaho from the United States, and to offset this Turkey purchased ostensibly two ships from Germany, the Goeben and Breslau, which sought refuge from the allied fleet in the Mediterranean. There has been some doubt, however, that there was a bona fide purchase, for it has been reported that these ships, although flying the crescent, retained their German crews and officers.

Tremendous pressure was brought by German advisers to induce Turkey to abandon the plans against Greece and take the field against Russia.

The staggering cost of continuing the mobilization raised a political storm, and the minister of war and his party were put on the defensive. The action of the entente powers threatening dire consequences if Turkey declared war, followed by German setbacks in Russia, Belgium and France, finally forced a demobilization.

Russia anticipated Turkey's violation of neutrality. Nearly two weeks ago the archives of the Russian embassy were transferred to Odessa.

War Bleaches Our Socks.

White socks are going to be the fashion. This applies to men and women alike. This time it is not Dame Fashion who sets the style, but the stern necessity of war. Several stocking makers announced that as soon as the present supply of dyes is exhausted they will have to make white footwear. The dyes came from Germany, and the importation has almost ceased.

If a Girl Wants a Career She Must Get Out and Work, Not Study All Her Life

Oliver Morosco, who is a maker of stars, says girls win success only through experience.

Get into the sausage machine and work; don't be an amateur all your life, is his advice.

THIS story has nothing whatever to do with the war. It is about a girl and her opportunities. When a girl is seventeen, intelligent, pretty and alive to the chances of life, she must beware of the music-roll habit. Statistics show that more girls wear out their glove fingers against a music roll than against any other recognized implement of trade. In other words, when Minnie has finished school and a career seems desirable, the family remembers how sweetly Minnie led the class song at commencement, and "has her voice cultivated."

The fact that Minnie studies with at least five music teachers, yet never gets beyond a parlor rendering of "The Rosary," proves to Oliver Morosco, theatre owner, manager, producer and manufacturer of dramatic material, that Minnie makes the mistake of becoming a "chronic student" when she might become a star in the permanent heaven of work and prosperity.

Being "Morosco'ed."

Out Los Angeles way, they have coined a verb: "To be Morosco'ed." Being "Morosco'ed" means, briefly, being heard, analyzed as to fitness, appraised dramatically and started in the kindergarten of the Morosco "school."

The next news the eastern states hear of the Morosco'ed product is when it appears in electric letters on Broadway thus: "Oliver Morosco presents Minnie Blank in So-and-So."

And New York hugs itself, chuckling, "We have discovered a new star."

Had Minnie allowed herself to contract the music-roll habit, and fed her little talent to the usual succession of voice culturists, each of which promised to make a great singer of her, she would, at twenty-eight, still be singing "The Rosary" to parlor audiences or leading the choir through Christmas carols, Easter festivals, weddings and funerals, while people said, "Minnie has a splendid voice; she ought to sing in grand opera."

"The trouble is," says Mr. Morosco, who is astonishingly youthful for a leading manager person, "that a girl has one chance in a million to be a grand opera success, where she has a million chances to one as a dramatic success.

How to Be a Star.

"Stars," he continued, "are much like business men. They do not drop down from heaven, ready-made and resplendent. They win success through the sausage machine of work and experience.

"Give a girl the fundamentals—youth, reasonable good looks, ambition, alertness, sensibility, temperament, and the manufacturing manager can make a star of her.

"The average girl who seeks success through the stereotyped avenue of music study must have these qualities too. Even more so, I should say, than the girl who would be an actress.

"The difference is here: A girl can be nursed along by half a dozen voice specialists, one after another, each with a different and promising method, and get nowhere. A girl cannot be fed into the mill of stage work in a manufacturing plant such as we have out in Los Angeles without becoming a definite product with a definite value.

"The 'manufacturer of theatrical stars' does not make teaching his end. It is but a means to an end. His aim is production, not mere training for somebody else to realize on.

Marketing Minnie.

"I believe the stage offers to-day the greatest field for the woman who wants to earn a splendid living and develop her talents to their utmost."

For Minnie's benefit, we will here quote a few Morosco facts:

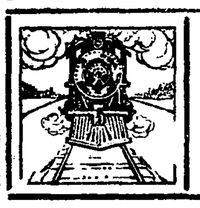

The Morosco theatres in Los Angeles comprise two—the Burbank and the Morosco—where original productions are made; the Majestic, where the big traveling stars play; the Lyceum, where a resident stock company employing a large force is primed to take hold of any sort of drama that may be contemplated, and another odd playhouse or two where tryouts of various kinds can be made.

By the time Minnie has been fed through this machinery she has found herself. If she stands all the tests she finally finds herself on Broadway. If she measures up, say 75 per cent. perfect, she goes into some one of the dozen road companies of the Morosco circuit. Or gets a comfortable, well-paying berth at the "home" theatre in Los Angeles. Or is held in reserve for some of the score of plays that are always being worked into shape from the manuscripts of the new writers.

Good Chance for Minnie.

And, by the way, there are now eight "Peg o' My Heart" companies skittering over the country, employing approximately 125 persons, two "Help Wanted" companies, say 40 people more, and if "Bird of Paradise" troupe, add another 25. Multiply these figures by the number of other managers' productions and you begin to realize the bigness of the demand for clever little actresses against the smallness of demand for operatic stars.

In short, it looked to me before I left the Morosco offices as if Minnie had a pretty good chance to earn a living on the stage and a pretty poor one by contracting the habit of the threadbare music roll.

RAILROAD NEWS

Items of Interest, Gathered Here and There, For The Boys Who Man The Trains

PRESIDENT OF B. R. & P. LOOKS ON BRIGHT SIDE

President William T. Noonan, of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh railway, is not looking for further business depression. He sees promise of business for his railway and other railways, if there is right co-operation among all interests. Mr. Noonan and the board of directors last week inspected all the trackage of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway. Speaking of the conditions he said:

"Business is not active, but we are trying to find employment for as many men as possible. Our improvement work for this year is nearing completion. Unless business gets much worse than it is,—and I do not believe it will—we expect to continue next year our policy of improvement and expansion.

"We continue to believe that a sound principle to follow is for every one to do as much as possible instead of as little, and not to become unduly alarmed over the present temporary depression in the volume of business."

Mr. Noonan's ideas on the present and future business conditions are substantiated by the monthly financial letter of the Lincoln National bank of Rochester, which is quoted in part as follows:

"We are not on the eve, but really in the midst, of a material improvement in business, and although some lines must still suffer because of the European conflict and other unsatisfactory conditions, the largest portion of the business world and the majority of lines will show improvement from this time on, partly because of the war and partly because business depression has lasted as long as it can.

"Just now 'boom talks' are being talked, and such talk should be frowned upon, because it leads to extravagances and causes too strong an anticipation of possible business. Over extension of credit and over-borrowing should be carefully avoided, but the times are propitious in most lines for a good strong pull with every promise of a material increase in business and profits."

$4,800 For A $6,500 Home

This is one of the best opportunities ever offered in Clearfield.

The property is located in the very best residential section of Clearfield. The house has 13 rooms with every modern convenience, including electric light, gas, hot water heating system, open fire place, and is finished in hard wood.

If you were to build now you could not duplicate this property for $6,500. It is delightfully arranged and comfortable, and is an ideal home.

My business interests are elsewhere so for 60 days, I have decided to consider offers at the Sacrifice Price of $4,800.

If you want a home that will prove a investment and a delight, write to-

DU BOIS ACORN CLUB VOTES TO BECOME "WET"

At a meeting of the Acorn club, in DuBois, called for the purpose of voting on a resolution to amend the constitution so as to exclude the serving of intoxicating liquors at functions given by the club, twenty-two members, leading citizens and business men of DuBois, resigned when the club voted "wet."

The Acorn club has no sideboard and has always been almost "dry." At the annual banquet, and perhaps three times yearly, liquors have been served. This is the second fefort made to do away with serving liquor by the club.

Twenty-two men who resigned are churchmen of DuBois and gave as their reasons that they could not consistently be members of a club that serves liquor and live up to their pretentions in the church.

VICTORIOUS FOOTBALLERS CELEBRATE THEIR TRIUMPH

Everybody interested in Clearfield athletics caught the spirit of joyous victory that ran high after the DuBois game on Saturday. The largest crowd that has attended a game for several seasons was out for the game and joined in the parade, led by the high school band and both teams and marched through the town.

Later in the evening another parade was formed and marched to the high school, where a great bonfire was built in front of the building, and everybody joined in the merry making and the high school yells led by the cheer leader, Jack Fulford.

A crowd of hunters from Altoona and Pittsburg went down on the river line passenger Saturday morning.

HIS LIFE SAVED BY A CRUCIFIX

proaching Germans would have been robbed of an easy entry into the allies' territory.

One of the officers on the ill-fated Cressy which was sunk by the German submarines was severely injured on the head, had both his legs broken and his feet crushed as he was thrown into the air by the explosion. His body was sucked under the water by the sinking cruiser, but was picked up by one of the rescue ships.

Twenty-four hours afterwards the injured officer regained consciousness and his first words were, "Are we downhearted? No!"

Honor for a Sergeant

A seargeant of the line was made adjutant for his coolness and bravery in an engagement, in Lorraine. With three men the sergeant was sent across an open field to attract the fire of the Germans so the colonel could tell where the enemy's trenches were and what their probable strength was. A hail of bullets was directed at the four men. They made their way to a small farmhouse where they climbed up on a tile roof and from the shelter of a chimney began firing at the Germans. Angered by the impudence of the four soldiers the Germans directed one of their batteries on the house and razed it.

"My smartest patrol leader is gone," the colonel remarked, as he saw the building crumble. The three privates were no more, but the little sergeant was soon seen running across the field toward his command. When the sergeant arrived breathless at headquarters the colonel asked with mock severity why he did not stay to continue the fire.

"Sorry sir, but the pigs knocked my house down," was the reply.

SKELETON OF UNKNOWN FOUND NEAR PENFIELD

The skeleton of a man was found on Sullivan Hill, near Penfield on Saturday by a party of hunters. Nothing but the bones remained, and Coroner Pollum and Dr. Lewis, of Penfield, are of the opinion that the men had been dead for at least two years.

A bullet was found where the waist of the dead man would be and the supposition is that he had been murdered. Nothing was found among his effects by which the dead man could be identified. It is thought that the man was of middle age.

PRESIDENT A GRANDPA SOON.

Mrs. Francis Sayre.

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 9.—The arrival of two twelfth horses at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre has given stimulus to the story that President Wilson will soon be a grandpa. Miss Jessie Wilson was married to Mr. Sayre on November 25 last.
